

KJ Electric to celebrate new facility's opening

KJ Electric of Syracuse, N.Y., a distributor of motors, drives, controls, and other electromechanical products with five locations in New York State, is celebrating the opening of a new facility in Albany with an open house May 8. The newly expanded 18,000-square-foot facility at 146 Railroad Ave. includes both a repair and distribution center. Vice president Kenny Jacobs said he was excited to welcome customers and members of the community to the facility. "It will be great to show our customers the services we provide," he said. The new building includes in-stock inventory of motors, drives, controls, and power transmission products, a motor repair facility, and general office space.
